Last week, when I was playing football at school, I accidentally broke the window. Luckily, I can run quickly, so I ran to the classroom and pick up the ball. But, when I was returning to the playground, the teacher saw what happened. She told me to follow her into the teachers' room.

At the teachers' room, the teacher said that I was irresponsible, because I just pick up the ball and ran away. I even didn't tell the janitor about it! The janitor must be furious now.

My punishment was to help the janitor clean up the pieces of glass. I can't have recess for a month! Now I'm furious at the teacher.

So, I played a trick on her. I know that she is afraid of frogs, so I put a handful of frogs into her handbag. 'I just wanted play a trick on her, that's all. No big deal.', I thought.

The next day, the teacher looked for me, as if I were a criminal. When the teacher finally found me, she told me to follow her into the teachers' room again. I saw her face, it was as red as a tomato yesterday, but today it was as white as toilet paper. So, I felt a little bit guilty.

Luckily, the bell rang and the teacher me go with just a verbal warning.
