Julie is your friend who lives in Canada. Both she and you love outdoor camping. In her last email, Julie asks you a question:

“What are the differences between

In your reply to Julie, you may talk about the differences of:

- weather conditions
- camp sites (or places)
- activities
- preparations

The pictures below may also help you write your reply letter.

usually do things like hiking or cooking. There aren't many winter campings in Hong Kong, so I prefer summer camp in Hong Kong.

Eventually, I will talk about the preparations for summer camp and winter camp. The first and most important thing is clothes. You need to wear different clothes to join different activities for either summer or winter camp. You usually pack thinner clothes to join summer camps. In addition, the freezing weather in winter affects the choice of clothes entirely. The next thing is food. It would be quite a matter if you pack the wrong food. Summer is a good condition for barbecue so you must bring food for barbecue, while winter is good for hot pot. You must bring the right food for either of them. I must remind that neither summer nor winter camping needs junk food. You must bring healthy food and drinks like sandwiches and juice. I think I need to stop writing now. Write back soon!

Yours sincerely,

Chris

Dear Julie,

Hi! How are you? I'm excited to hear from you! Well, there are quite a lot of differences between summer and winter camping.

Firstly, I will talk about the weather. Obviously, the weather in summer is extremely hot and the weather in winter is freezing cold. Due to the weather, the campsites are different too. The summer campsites <sup>are</sup> often built in mountains or places who are higher. Winter campsites are built in lower and larger areas.

You may think that all camping activities are the same. In fact, some special activities may only be available in a particularly weather. Almost all activities depends on the weather. Summer activities are something like sports. For example, hiking and water activities. You will wear clothes thinner and looser in that case. On the other hand, water sports or activities were always unavailable due to the cold weather. People in other countries ski or do things that needed snow. Unfortunately, there is no snow in Hong Kong. We
