Question

"Sunday is coming! My family is spending the day in the country park!
I'm so excited!"

This feeling was in your mind every day last week.

You also imagined some of the fun activities.

But when you and your family woke up on Sunday morning, you saw this notice on TV:

"No.8 Storm Signal was issued at 6:30 a.m."

In around 200 words, write about your experience. You may use the outline below.

- family plans
- feelings through the week
- feelings on Sunday morning
- new family activities

Give your writing a title.

New plans for joy

"I think we ought to bring little Anson to the country park for some fresh air, after studying at home for the exam so long," the words of my parents rang in my ears like the jingling bells of Santa Claus. I was even happier than a clam! I was over the moon! My parents were taking me to the country park! I was already on cloud nine thinking of the stunning scenery on the hilltop..... the wind ruffling and whooshing through the side of my ears while riding on a bike... and the best of all - the happiness and joy while spending time with my family.

The following week I was so excited that I couldn't help not smiling delightfully all day. On Monday, I did some research about the country park we were going to and listed out a bunch of activities that we could do (like cycling, hiking, strawberry-picking, etc). On Tuesday, I chose some nice clothes to went for the trip. On Wednesday, I asked my Uncle who is always going to other countries to lend me one of his digital cameras so that I could take pictures on the trip. On Thursday, I bought some snacks and fruits for the trip. On Friday, I packed my stuff for the trip. On Saturday, I went to bed at eight o'clock so that I won't feel sleepy on the trip tomorrow.

On Sunday morning, I jumped out of bed at seven o'clock in the morning and ran to my parent's bedroom. Strange. They weren't in bed. Eventually, I found them in the living room watching TV. Then I saw something that stung me like a razor-sharp spear. The news said: "No. 8 Storm Signal was issued at 6:30 a.m." Big fat tears rolled down my cheek as I cried helplessly. Mom saw me and hugged me. As she tried to calm me down, dad said: "I've got an idea."

"Wee-hee!" I yelled as I rode on the roller coaster of the indoor amusement park later that afternoon. I was glad we could spend time together with my family happily.
