Dear Jackie,

How are you? A disastrous incident happened to my best friend, Jane. Let me tell you about it.

Last Sunday was Jane's birthday. I suggested that we could try to have a dinner at the new restaurant called Lucky Choice Seafood Restaurant. We settled down and looked at the menu. "The 'Lucky Big Fish' is their signature dish. Let's have a try," I said. I ordered some dishes which 'seemed' to be scrumptious.

As we were waiting for the food, we started to have a chat. She shared an interesting story with me about a poor farmer which was pretty amusing. I enjoyed talking to her for she is funny and positive.

Unluckily, for some reasons, I didn't notice that this restaurant wasn't hygienic at all. There were insects crawling on the floor. The worst of all, a thieving rat was gingerly tip-toe walking nearer and nearer, closing in.

A lanky waiter carefully presented the dishes to us.

He even told us that the fish was fresh. It was foolish to believe in him.

I had a bit of the fish, I would have to spit it out. The fish was inedible. I had a bit of the vegetables. I nearly vomited. The vegetables were indigestible. I had a throbbing headache after tasting the terrible food. I whispered to myself, "What happen to the food?"

Jane had a terrible pain in her stomach. She cried, "Help! Oh no! Ah" I felt really angry as if my blood was boiling. How could a restaurant serve such 'rubbish'?

At last, the ambulance came and an ambulanceman drove Jane and I to the nearest hospital.

I felt sorry for Jane. It was my fault for suggesting to eat have a meal at Lucky Choice Seafood Restaurant. Never go there and have a meal!

Hope I'm looking forward to hearing from you soon!

Best wishes,

Chris
